Handwriting collection: how to write the pages

github.com/danielrosehill/Daniel-Handwriting-Recognition

Paper

- Any size from A6 (pocket notepad) to A4. A5 is ideal. Mixing sizes is good.
- Each sheet says RULED or UNRULED for round 1. Round 2 (optional) = same text, other type.
- Ruled: if the rule gap is 8 mm or more, write on every line. If narrower, skip a line.
- Unruled: leave a clear gap (about one line height) between lines.
- Turn small paper landscape if a line won't fit across. White/cream paper; no graph paper.

Pen

- Black (dark blue OK) ballpoint 0.7-1.0 mm or gel 0.5-0.7 mm. Ideally your everyday pen.
- Avoid fine 0.3-0.4 mm tips (faint in photos), pencil, and felt-tips that bleed.
- Using a second pen for round 2 makes the model more robust.

Writing

1. Write the sheet code (e.g. P07) small in the top-right corner. Round 2: P07-2.
2. One printed line = one handwritten line. Never wrap a line or join two.
3. Copy exactly: capitals, punctuation, numbers. Don't copy the grey line numbers.
4. Write at your normal speed and style, not your neatest.
5. Run out of room? Continue on a new sheet labelled P07b (first one P07a; round 2: P07-2a, P07-2b).
   Lines stay whole and in order. Small paper will often need 2-3 sheets per page.
6. Mistake? Keep going. Just report it, e.g. "P07 line 4: wrote 'teh'".
7. Leave about 1.5 cm margin around the edges.

Photos

- One photo per sheet, phone flat above it, whole sheet in frame, no fingers on it.
- Daylight or even room light, no flash, dark plain background behind the paper.
- Upload to the Drive fe/ folder. File names don't matter; the corner code identifies them.

It was a quiet evening in the city.

The lights came on one by one along the street, and somewhere a dog barked at nothing in particular. I sat by the window with a cup of tea and a notebook, trying to remember what I had meant to write down earlier in the day. Ideas come quickly and leave just as fast,

which is why I carry a pen everywhere.

Most of them are not very good, but every so often one of them is worth keeping, and that makes it all worth it.

Round 2 (optional): UNRULED

The weather changed suddenly on Sunday.

By noon the sky was dark grey and the wind had picked up from the west. We closed the shutters and waited. The rain arrived in heavy bursts, then stopped,

then started again, as if it could not quite decide what it wanted to do.

In the morning everything smelled clean and the streets were full of puddles.

Children jumped in them on the way to school while their parents shouted at them to keep their shoes dry.

Ideas for the next project:

1. A tool that turns voice notes into tasks

2. A better way to search old emails

3. Automatic tagging for photos

4. A dashboard for household spending

5. Summaries of long documents

Which one is the most useful?

Probably the first, because I record

voice notes all day and rarely listen to them again. If they became tasks automatically, nothing would get lost.

Start small and test it for a week.

Round 2 (optional): UNRULED

1 Dear Michael,

2 Thank you for your message yesterday.

3 I have looked at the proposal and I

4 think it is a good start, but there are

5 a few points we should discuss before

6 moving ahead. Could we find a time next

7 week to talk it through? Tuesday or

8 Wednesday afternoon would suit me best.

9 I will send over my comments in writing

10 beforehand so you can have a look.

11 Best regards,

12 Daniel

Round 2 (optional): RULED

Good handwriting takes patience, and mine has never been especially neat.

At school the teachers complained that my letters leaned in every direction.

These days I mostly type, so when I do pick up a pen my hand gets tired after a page or two. Still, there is something about writing on paper that helps me think more clearly. The slowness forces me to choose words more carefully, and crossing things out leaves a record of how the idea changed along the way.

P16

Round 1: RULED paper

Round 2 (optional): UNRULED

Write "P16" in the top-right corner. One line below = one handwritten line.

1 Recipe: simple lentil soup

2 1 cup red lentils, rinsed

3 1 onion, 2 carrots, 2 cloves garlic

4 1 tsp cumin, 1/2 tsp turmeric, salt

5 1.5 litres of water or stock

6 Fry the onion until soft, about 5 min.

7 Add carrots, garlic and the spices.

8 Stir in the lentils and the water.

9 Simmer for 25 minutes, then blend.

10 Squeeze in half a lemon at the end.

11 Serves four. Keeps for three days.

12 Freeze the rest in small portions.

Questions to think about this year:

What do I want to spend less time on?

Which projects actually matter to me?

Who should I be talking to more often?

What would I do with one free day a week?

Am I learning anything new each month?

What habits are worth keeping, and which ones should I quietly drop?

Where does my money really go?

How can I make mornings less rushed?

What would make next year easier?

Write the answers down and revisit.
